INDIAN AGENT IN U. S. SAYS EGYPT IS REVOLT SWEEP

Dr. M. Krinska.

Dr. M. Krinska, one of the three representatives of the India-National Congress now in Chicago seeking American aid in the cause of India's freedom, says that the British government is withholding full reports of conditions in Egypt. He asserts that a cablegram he has received from Calcutta states that several hundred men have been killed in the rioting in Egypt.

FOURTH OF JULY WAS WARMEST DAY OF THE YEAR 1921

December holds the snowfall record and November claims the rainfall record during the year of 1921, according to the local weather observer, Mrs. Ada Jeffries, bridge-st. There were 9 inches of snow during December and 7.41 of rain during November.

The total amount of rainfall for 1921 was 48.90 inches and the total snowfall during the winter and spring months for last year was 16.53 inches.

Fourth of July was the hottest day of 1921. The thermometer registered 98 degrees in the shade. According to Mrs. Ada Jeffries' weather bureau thermometer, the coldest day last year was on April 11, the mercury resting at 2 degrees above zero, the record reads.

Following is the highest and lowest temperatures for each month during 1921:

January, highest, 59, on 4th. Lowest, 13, on 26th.
February, highest, 67, on 16th. Lowest, 13, on 21st.
March, highest, 80, on 27th. Lowest, 24, on 4th and 29th.
April, highest, 85, on 25th. Lowest, 20, on 11th. (according to records).
May, highest, 91, on 23rd. Lowest, 32, on 8th.
June, highest, 95, on 24th. Lowest, 45, on 6th and 8th.
July, highest, 98, on 4th. Lowest, 41, on 22nd.
August, highest, 92, on 30th. Lowest, 47, on 15th, 22nd and 23rd.
September, highest, 92, on 1st. Lowest, 41, on 30th.
October, highest, 97, on 17th. Lowest, 25th. Lowest, 29, on 13th.
November, highest, 69, on 19th. Lowest, 21, on 13th.
December, highest, 62, on 1st. Lowest, 22nd.

In a state is the rainfall for each month for business, 3.36 inches; fact that the nation's average, 5.51 after two years of severe drought, 2.72 loss is finally and definitely, 2.72 into a strong position.

He said the packing industry had finished the year with a normal production and that this production has not been, crammed into warehouses, but has passed freely into the trade channels and thence into consumption.

NEW YORK, Dec. 31. — Looking back over 1921, and assessing its portion in the great upheaval thru which the world has been passing since 1913, it might be called the Year of the Return to Reason. Believers in the fatality of the number seven might see in it the end of a period of bad will which has paved the way for a period of Good Will.

What stands out above all else, in the record of 1921 is the fact that the two great children of Force—the Bolshevik Imperialism of Russia and the Capitalist Imperialism of Western Europe—have both been checked and badly discredited. The middle classes of the world, which want a policy of live and let live, have taken in hand the problem of finding an adjustment on practical, peaceful lines; and they have delivered some hard blows to the ambitious politicians and agitators who sought to build up great structures of power, regardless of justice or good will.

Conditions a Year Ago
In order to judge the distance we have traveled in the twelve-month let us glance back at the condition in which the world found itself at the beginning of 1921. Here is a brief outline:

Bolshevism had disposed of all the enemies which had threatened to overthrow it and Trotsky was preparing a vast army for campaigns against India and the Dardanelles.

The Socialist International of Amsterdam, only a little less radical than the Moscow International, was scheming a Labor revolution which was to begin in England and spread thru all the industrial countries.

French Imperialists were plotting to get a strangle hold on Germany by taking possession of all the Ruhr and Silesian industrial regions; to break up the Reich by splitting off the Catholic states of the South; and to set up a new Danube Confederation which would give them complete control of the Continent. Over these plans London and Paris were quarreling bitterly.

British Imperialists were still insisting on carrying out the grand schemes on which they had entered as the result of the Paris peace conference; and on rounding out their Empire by possession of all of old Southern Turkey and Persia and protectorates in the Caucasus.

Japanese Imperialists still had their troops far into Siberia and China, were reaching for control of Outer Mongolia, and were defying the United States to interfere with their schemes.

A naval race was on among the great sea powers; and France was insisting on keeping up the greatest military machine in the world.

The Record of Progress
All the great problems have not been settled—not by any means—but here are some of the significant changes that were wrought in 1921: (Continued on Page Seven)

CASE OF EAGLES HEADED FOR THE SUPREME COURT

It is the prediction of C. Homer Durand that the case of the six officials of the local lodge of Eagles will terminate only after reaching the supreme court.

Durand is attorney for the Eagles of officials and is determined to fight every development in the case.

Frank Jones William McCoy, William Cupps, Howard Bible, Daniel Willson and Edwin Miller each pleaded not guilty to the charges of possessing intoxicating liquor, unlawfully manufacturing intoxicating liquor, and unlawfully possessing materials with which to make the liquor when arraigned before Mayor W. S. Tish Saturday afternoon.

Friday afternoon, January 6, at one o'clock was the time set for the trial of the six men on the three prohibition law violation charges.

FEDERAL TAX IS

LIFTED JANUARY 1

The federal tax on passenger and freight rates was removed with the dawn of the new year, according to L. D. Webner, agent of the Pennsylvania lines.

The tax amounted to 3 per cent on passenger fares and 3 per cent on freight charges. It amounted to more than $13 on a round trip ticket to California points.

MERGING OF CITY OFFICES HAS NOT BEEN ACCOMPLISHED

City Ordinance Ignored By Present Council Affects Clerkship

EXTRA PAY DRAWN

City Auditor Is Legally Clerk Of Council And Board Of Control

On the evening of June 23, 1919, city council passed an ordinance merging the duties of the clerk of the city water works, clerk of the board of control and clerk of city council with the duties of the city auditor.

It reads: "Be it ordained by the Council of City of Coshocton, State of Ohio.

Section 1.—That the positions of clerk of the water works, clerk of the board of control, clerk of the city council, be and the same are hereby abolished.

Section 2.—That the duties of the clerk of water works, clerk of the board of control, clerk of the city council be and the same are hereby merged with the duties of the city auditor and he shall perform all of said services heretofore performed by said clerks.

Section 3.—That the salary of the city auditor shall be $100.00 per month, payable semi-annually.

Section 4.—That the city auditor be and is hereby authorized to employ one clerk in his office at a compensation of $2.00 per day not to exceed $600.00 in any one year.

Section 5.—That all ordinances or parts of ordinances not consistent herewith or contrary hereto, be and the same are hereby repealed and held of no effect.

Section 6.—That this ordinance shall take effect and be in force January 1, 1920.

When the present council took its place, with H. L. Norris, presiding its first act was to select a clerk of council. A report of that meeting, held Monday evening January 12, 1920 stated: "Owing to the fact that recent legislation merged the duties of the city auditor with those of the clerk of the water works department and the clerk of the council it was believed that the choice would fall to W. H. Williams, city auditor.

"However council voted unanimously for O. S. Bowen in that capacity. Mr. Bowen, who has served as clerk for several years, accepted the position and declared that he did so at the request of City Auditor Williams."

FOOLED THE PUBLIC

Altho the state law endows a city council with the power to choose its own clerk, it was, as the above report states, believed that the new council (Continued on Page Eight)

MEETING TO DECIDE UPON A COMMUNITY PROGRAM JAN. 5TH

Definite action on whether or not Coshocton will extend an invitation to the National Community Service society to present its program here will be taken at a meeting to be held in the public library building Thursday afternoon, January 5, at 2 o'clock.

Representatives of every religious, fraternal and civic organization in the city are requested to be there. Invitations to a number of people connected with such organizations were being prepared Saturday by Mayor W. S. Tish.

At a meeting of a number of Coshocton business people, called at the public library Friday afternoon by Mayor W. S. Tish, the community service society's program was explained by Frank H. Young, field representative of that organization.

He stated that the organization which he represents will, upon invitation from the city, send an instructor here who will supervise a community program for three months at a nominal cost to the city, the greater part of the expense to be borne by the service society.

At the end of the three months, the city may decide whether or not the service is desired as a permanent institution, and if desired permanent, the society will provide an instructor to be paid a regular salary by the city.

The program of the National Community Service society includes physical, mental and social training for every person in the community, regardless of religious or social affiliations. In the opinion of local boosters, the program will eventually lead to the erection of a community building in Coshocton.

As outlined by Mr. Young, the community program met with the individual approval of the majority of Coshocton people who attended the meeting Friday afternoon.

New Year's Day, Oldest Of Our Holidays, Brings Flood Of Memories Of "Ye Olden Times"

DEPARTED YEAR WAS NOT ALL SUNSHINE

Coming Of 1922, Youngest Of Father Time's Brood, Is Welcomed As It Crosses The Threshold

(By CHAS. E. COTTOM)

THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW

May the New Year prove as an old friend tried—

May the New Year give all the old denied—

May fortune's bright smile ever lighten your way,
Is our wish, dear reader, for you, today.

Once again the relentless hand of Time has written the fateful word into the life story of a departed year. The volume is closed; and, with a sigh for the old, we turn with hopeful hearts to greet the stranger year just ushered in upon us.

In the old, old days, of the long ago, the advent of the New Year was hailed with much of pomp and ceremony, and joyous revelry.

New Year's Day is the oldest recognized holiday in this country. In the infancy of our Nation's history, Christmas was regarded as merely a sectarian church day frowned upon by the Puritans and but meagrely observed by Catholics and Episcopalians. But now, owing largely to the advanced liberalism that has developed with the growth of Christianity, the anniversary of the Savior's birth has justly come to be regarded throughout Christendom and wherever the story of the Shepherds and the Star of Bethlehem has been told, as the most sacred and faithfully observed of the world's holidays.

But in our earliest history, and as (Continued on Page Eight)

NEW CITADEL MAY OCCUPY SAME SITE

According to information received from Adjutant Anthony Vonderville, of the Salvation Army post, Saturday, it is likely that another Salvation Army citadel will be built in the same location on north Third-st. in the place of the one that recently burned down.

Contractors Henry Richardson and W. W. Morford appraised the citadel fire loss Friday afternoon. The contractors asserted that a similar citadel could be erected for $5,000.70.

The contractors submitted the figures to the local Jacob & Armstrong insurance agency. The local insurance agency will submit these figures to the Cleveland company, with which the local post carries an $8,000 policy.

What action will be taken by the insurance company in Cleveland will be known by the local post in the near future.

RAILROAD BOARD OFFICIALS SEES INDUSTRIAL PEACE FOR RAILWAYS OF COUNTRY DURING PRESENT YEAR

REVENUE STAMPS ON PARCEL POST THINGS OF PAST

Postmaster Charles Lamberson announced Saturday night that beginning today, January 1, it will not be necessary to place revenue stamps on parcel post packages.

This relief was brot about by the Revenue Act of November 23, 1921. "The public will be benefited by not being obliged to buy revenue stamps, and by not having the trouble of affixing them to parcels," said Mr. Lamberson.

Postmaster Lamberson also announced Saturday night that he is now ready to fill all orders for the new 1922 Treasury Savings certificates, issued in denominations of $100 and $25 maturity value, the sale prices of which are $80 and $20 each respectively.

According to the postmaster these certificates, if held until maturity (5 years from date of issue), will net the purchaser 4 1/2 per cent interest compounded semi-annually. "They can, however, like previous issues, be redeemed at any time prior to maturity, in which event interest will be paid at the rate of 3 1/2 per cent compounded semi-annually to the postmaster."

Mr. Lamberson says that these securities from 1918 to 1921 have been issued in the well-known form of War Savings Stamps and during this time the legal limit of holdings was $1,000. "This maximum amount is now increased so that any individual, firm, corporation or fraternal organization can own $5,000 maturity value of any issue," says Postmaster Lamberson.

RABBIT HUNTING SEASON CLOSES

Saturday evening marked the close of a successful open season for hunting rabbits.

According to Coshocton co nimrods many rabbits were killed during the open season, from November 15 to January 1.

Scores of hunters took advantage of the last day of the rabbit hunting season, Saturday.

The last day of the rabbit hunting season falls on Sunday, January 1, but according to the state law no one has the right to hunt, kill or pursue any kind of an animal on Sunday.

According to Section 1396 of the Ohio Fish & Game Laws, rabbits which are found doing actual and substantial damage to grain, berries, fruit, vegetables, trees or shrubbery and other damage to property may be killed by the owner at any time except on Sundays.

OPERATORS WILL NOT MEET WITH UNION LEADERS

Heads Of Southeast Ohio Mines Prefer To Deal Individually With Men

SAY WAGES TOO HIGH

Eighteen Thousand Men Of U. M. W. Of A. Will Be Affected

CLEVELAND, Dec. 31.—Pittsburgh vein coal operators controlling approximately 100 mines in Harrison, Belmont and Jefferson counties, and employing approximately 18,000 union miners when the mines are in full operation, will not meet with officials of the United Mine Workers at the William Penn hotel Pittsburgh to consider preliminaries to the negotiation of a new wage scale effective April 1, it was announced here today.

Operators of the Eastern Ohio coal fields are in session here today to take action on the Pittsburgh and southern Ohio district operators in refusing to meet with the miners to negotiate a new wage scale in the central competitive coal fields.

According to reports from Columbus last yesterday a wage cut of at least 20 per cent will be asked by southern Ohio operators. It is expected the eastern Ohio operators will take similar action.

At the conclusion of the meeting the following resolution, expressing it was said, the unanimous sentiment of the members of the organization, was given out:

"Resolved that in view of the situation which has developed, we feel that nothing can be accomplished by a meeting at the William Penn hotel in Pittsburgh, January 6, 1922 and we therefore decline to send a representative to meet with the miners at that time and place, pursuant to the call embodied in President Lewis's letter of December 6, 1921."

Representative operators refused to be directly quoted, but it was pointed out that the present is an extremely critical time in the coal industry.

It was said that the wages of coal miners are the only ones in industry which have not been deflated and that, in consequence, miners' wages are entirely too high.

Operators refused to explain why it was considered best to meet their men individually than by representatives of the entire body of hierarchs. It was stated there was no intention of attempting to bring about open shop conditions in the Ohio mines.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 31.—First news of the action at Cleveland today of eastern Ohio coal operators in refusing to meet with the United Mine Workers officials to discuss preliminaries to negotiating a new wage scale was conveyed by the Inter National News Service to Leo Hall president of the Ohio mine workers.

Altho declining to comment on today's developments, President Hall intimated that he may have something to say early next week.

COURTHOUSE WILL BE OPEN MONDAY, CAN'T PAY TAXES

Offices in the Coshocton-co courthouse will remain open during the regular hours Monday, January 2, in spite of the fact that the day is being generally observed as New Year's and is a legal holiday.

No tax money will be received by the county treasurer until Tuesday however, according to an announcement Saturday. Because Monday is a legal holiday, and checks made out on that day can be cancelled the following business day, Treasurer Charles Bechtel has decided to take no chances of loss on tax money.

It is necessary for the treasurer and auditor's office to remain open Monday to issue and pay warrants for witnesses who will appear before the grand jury which has been ordered to report Monday.

The clerk's office will also remain open to care for the usual business connected with the opening of the grand jury session.

Court proceedings are considered valid on any legal holiday, it was explained at the courthouse. The grand jury has been called for Monday.

All of the retail stores and banks in the city will be closed Monday.

Darling Funeral

Funeral services will be held Wednesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock at the late home near Nellie, for Mrs. Washington Darling, who died Friday morning from pneumonia. Rev. C. C. Erwin will have charge of the funeral services.

Burial will be made at Darling Run cemetery.

Owing to the fact that her children from the west could not arrive here sooner, the funeral has been set for Wednesday.

LISTEN TO LEASE

He has at last run an advertisement stating Trades Council ran an advertisement appealing to the public and farmers for them to patronize our union barbers so they can have more money to educate their children and give their families more recreation by the shorter hours, and he asks how about your children and family by sacrificing to our union barbers and he says just ask them where you come in. We will say to you that are un-organized, must come in under the wire you have been thrown out of employment and your wages have been reduced thru the open shop movement which is on all over the country and that is what Lease runs, an open shop. Let his barbers answer, is their rent, board and room lowered from war prices? He says you will enjoy a good laugh if we answer. We already quoted why in Wednesday's and Thursday's Tribune so the laugh is on Lease. Now Mr. Lease, if you are doing the good for the public and farmers let them have your past record for the last 10 years through the forum. Are you at present making enough to educate your children under your open shop conditions? Are you making your home in our city? Can you truthfully make enough under your open shop system to live right, keep all debts paid up, such as our union barbers must do? We will leave that to some of the public. Now as to you wanting the credit to bring down prices when they come, we will let the public know now that before Lease thought of coming here the Barbers had made a move to lower their prices, but found out conditions did not warrant it at present. For instance, carpenters lowered in Oct. their scale 10 per cent, up went lumber, most of it 5 per cent. So you see it doesn't do the public any good by lowering. And we must say what customers you get you will find they are the un-employed or the un-organized who are making small wages which is caused by the open shop and are forced to go to your shop to stretch their dollar. So now Lease you have it all, give the public what we have asked you. As we have plenty more to ask you.

OUTLOOK FOR FUTURE BRIGHT SAYS PACKER

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—The largest industry in the United States, slaughtering and meat packing, faces the future confidently and believes that all business may find a good omen in that fact.

Thomas Wilson, president of the institution of meat packers, declared in a statement today: "A good augury for business in general inheres in the fact that the nation's great industry after two years of severe and grievous loss is finally and definitely emerging into a strong position."

He said the packing industry had had finished the year 1921 with a normal production and that "this production has not been crammed into warehouses, but has passed freely into the trade channels and thence into consumption."

DEMANDS OF FRANCE MAY NOT BE URGED

BY WILLIAM COOKE

PARIS, Dec. 31.—The first conciliatory note sounded in high official quarters over the Franco-British controversy at Washington came today from Admiral Guépratte, vice president of the naval commission of the chamber of deputies.

"I have been much affected by news of the break at Washington," said the admiral. "But, in view of the necessity in which France finds herself, to assure the security of this country, I believe it would have been advisable to avoid a clash."

"However, much they may be 'bluff,' questions of national character are always dangerous. France may either lose her prestige in an odious way, or make concessions from her demand for $6,000 tons of submarines, because no other power at the Washington conference asked so much."

"I am surprised that the reported breach at Washington over submarines should have been accentuated because it must be realized that the Washington conference is only a stepping stone towards disarmament."

George Leygues, former premier and minister of marine, he continued: "It is ridiculous to suppose the question of naval ratios could have been settled so easily and without differences of opinion, however the impressions seem to have gone abroad that the naval program was not carefully studied in advance of the Washington conference."

France has large interests that require a navy in proportion to their size. Politically, France cannot play the role of a third rate nation in world affairs. I believe this matter is bound to have an echo at Cannes, but I can foresee a satisfactory arrangement later."

FAMOUS STATISTICIAN FORECASTS WHAT'S COMING IN 1922; ROGER BABSON'S CHART

In discussing the general business outlook Roger W. Babson prominent business authority outlines coming conditions as follows:

"Things look better than a year ago. At this time last year we were deflating at the most rapid rate the country has ever known. Everything was on the toboggan. Since then the Babson Commodity Index has dropped from $3.71 in June 1920 to $1.71, in August 1921 (a drop of 54 per cent) and now stands at $1.83. Commercial paper rates have dropped from 8 per cent to 5 1/2 per cent. Business early in the summer touched the lowest point since 1915. For the last few months there has been a slight recovery. This means that the 'wringing out' process has developed in a substantial way. 1921 failures have totaled nearly $700,000,000—more than twice as much as any previous year in the history of the United States! Moreover, they are continuing at a very high rate. Inventories have been drastically cut. Factories are closed or running only half time.

"After the business debacle we had from 1916 to 1920, the best thing that could happen was just such a drastic deflation as we are experiencing. The sooner a solid foundation is established the better off business will be. Do not misunderstand this, however. Superficial students are saying that we shall immediately vault into an era of good business again, but statistics do not corroborate this view. After the orgy of inflation above referred to, it takes time to correct the situation. Thus far we have swung about half way around the inevitable cycle of events.

"We have passed thru periods of declining stock prices and commodity prices, and to some extent declining real estate prices. We are already getting the first taste of low money rates. Considering all things, we may be said to stand approximately as noted by the arrow in the diagram above:

"The Babson chart has recovered from a low of 29 per cent below normal to its present position 11 per cent below normal. The recovery has been rapid. It probably will not continue at such a lively rate. After the recent seasonal improvement we shall probably have a reaction, and then another upturn. Of course some lines which have already been severely deflated such as Textiles, Leather Products and Packing will improve, but others including Coal, Steel and Oil will decline. Sales the early months of the year will be lower than 1921 but some improvement should bring next fall up so that the net result will show 1922 to be about the same as 1921. Except we shall be further along toward the brisk business which must eventually return.

"Our hindrances now stand as follows:

- (1) Conditions in Europe are still chaotic. We are all grateful for the improvement since the Disarmament Conference began but in ordinary times Europe has taken over half our exports. At present she is more interested in selling to us than buying.
- (2) Our agricultural areas are having the worst depression in history. Particularly is this true of the corn belt, where crops are worth little or nothing and where the things the farmer buys are still very high.
- (3) There is still a disheartening lack of balance in other lines, and between wholesale and retail prices, wages and profits.

"(4) Nearly every industry is suffering from excess capacity developed during the war, and from a burdensome overhead which must be eliminated. It takes time to correct all these unfavorable influences.

The year 1922 will serve to smooth out many of the difficulties. As to commodities, most agricultural and food products are already at the low point, and ought slowly to recover. Others, like petroleum products, chemicals and certain building materials, are still too high. Generally speaking, localities and industries which had a big boom during the war are absolutely flat. The other localities and industries have been little hurt and are doing a fair business. This again is a wonderful demonstration of the great law of action and reaction.

"Furthermore, statistics show that the localities which were the first to slump will be the first to offer sales opportunities. During the coming year, the northeastern section of the country will show up more favorably than other territories, and the sales departments that are ready for competition will get the business.

"It is a great satisfaction that the monetary situation is so much better than last year. In spite of its severe criticism, the Federal Reserve Board is entitled to great credit for the way it has handled things. Money will continue to work lower, and this means that bonds will continue their upward trend which I so strongly emphasized a year ago. This is one thing on which we can all be optimistic. If you have not got your bonds, buy them before they get any higher. I am also feeling better concerning the stock market, although it is still too sidled as far as the various groups are concerned. Regardless of the 1922 record, and temporary recoveries commodity price averages should work slowly back toward pre-war levels.

"Remember, however, the following favorable points for 1922.

- (1) Money is getting cheaper every day.
- (2) The Disarmament Conference and similar factors are making some things look better.
- (3) Taxation tendencies are now in the direction to help business.
- (4) The Congressional elections take place this year.
- (5) In a moral and religious sense, the people are getting nearer to the earth.

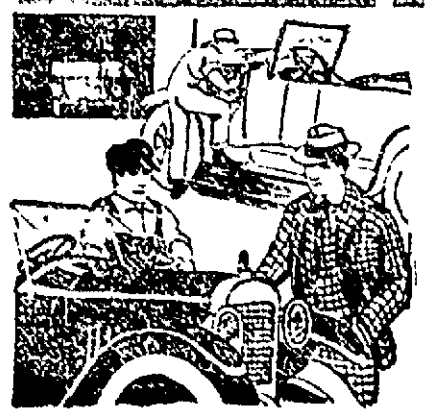

"Just a word concerning these last two points. There is no doubt that the administration is going to do everything possible to bolster up things and make everybody happy as the year moves onward. Such a process would work a decided stimulant into the situation later in the year—even the year as a whole may not show up any better than 1921. Again, the awful wave of spending, high living, crime and irreligion incident to 1919 and 1920 is passing away. This is fundamental to the whole business fabric. When we get back to the old fashioned virtues—thrift, honesty and true religion—we can look for good business.

The successful concerns of 1922 will—

- (A) Get their prices as near to 1913 as possible.
 - (B) Be ready for severe competition.
 - (C) Cut down overhead.
 - (D) Increase turnover.
 - (E) Exercise real salesmanship.
- There will be business done in 1922, but don't forget the old saying—"He that seeketh, findeth." There will be business and the man who goes after it aggressively will get it.

BE GOOD OR GET OUT SAYS SCRAPPY MAYOR

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Dec. 31.—"Love up, drink up, pack up and move or behave," is Mayor elect Oles' New Years greeting to Youngstown's underworld as announced today. Oles plans to attend the first Christian Church tomorrow to hear Rev. Levi Battman's sermon on why he declined the post of safety director in Oles' cabinet. In the afternoon, he states, he will address the policemen at roll call and "give them hell."

The following is Mayor elect Oles' proclamation:

"I am going to give the underworld of this city one week's notice to love up, drink up, pack up and move, or behave. I am going to give you this week's grace because I feel down in my heart that it would be a shame to pull you all in and take the last dollar from you in fines and fill our jails to overflowing. Therefore, I am going to give you this notice. I want to state right here that on the seventh day of January at 12 o'clock the lid is going on. It makes no difference who you are, how much pull you have, how well you know me, or what you think you can do. There will be no excuses accepted or lenience extended to any one. This includes street walkers and parasites that live on the proceeds of the underworld. In fact, this includes everyone that is not a law abiding citizen. Pass this word to your friends as there will be no excuses taken under any consideration."

"George L. Oles."

WIFE OF MURDERED CHINAMAN SOUGHT BY NEW YORK COPS

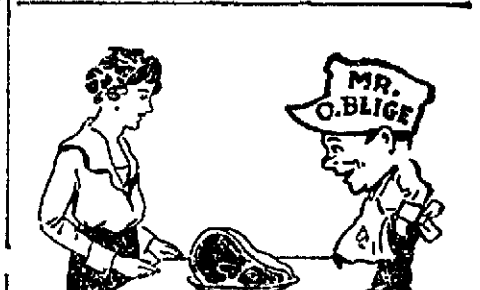

NEW YORK, Dec. 31.—Police today are seeking the beautiful wife of Home Shew, a Chinaman, as the only clue to the brutal slaying of Shew and another Chinaman, identified as Ton Fat, whose bodies were found in Shew's twenty eighth street apartment. Both men had evidently been dead about five days.

There were evidences of a struggle and near Shew's body was an opium lamp. The faces of both victims had been battered in with blunt instruments.

A trunk, contents of which police hoped would throw some light on the girl was taken to the station house.

Smart Velour Coat Frock Showing Novel Sleeve Lines

By MARY BROOKS PICKEN

MANY a modern cloth frock has ambitions that extend beyond those of the ordinary street dress and soars, for individuality, in the realm of coat styles. Ambitions such as this sometimes serve to disguise almost completely the purpose of the costume, although occasionally tell-tale evidence, such as a snug wrist edge or a close armhole line, betrays the fact that the costume is, after all, not a coat but one of the fascinating coat frocks that we have recently been hearing so much about.

A wealth of utility and of smartness envelops the wearer of this coat frock of hunter's green fine-weave velour. Naturally the principal point of novelty is in the sleeves, for sleeves must have primary consideration nowadays. But the low, bloused waist line, the high fur collar, the trimming of ciré braid and embroidery arranged in such an unusual manner, and the uneven hem effect are all worthy of note.

Moose hall was the scene of an especially pretty affair, Friday evening, when Mr. and Mrs. James P. Shepler entertained the young people in their dance class with an unusually delightful dancing party.

The hall was tastefully decorated for the occasion with greenery, Christmas decorations and flowers and the younger folks in their dainty frocks of organdies and taffetas, completed the setting.

A splendid musical program was presented by Hay's five piece orchestra. During the intermission, the Misses Hoster Meek, Annette Ashman, Ellen Hing and Josephine Jones sang a group of popular songs and were heartily applauded.

More than 100 people, including the pupils and their parents were present for the occasion.

The dancing class, under the supervision of Mr. and Mrs. Shepler, is proving so delightful and enjoyable for the younger folks, that they announce their second term to begin January 6.

France Hesitates

THE unwillingness or inability of the French government to agree to a reduction in submarine armament is a matter of world-wide regret. As Arthur Balfour pointed out to the conference at the last public session, France first prevented any positive action looking toward a limitation of land armament. Now France is making impossible an agreement to limit the scope of submarines. In these two matters France is undeniably the outstanding militaristic power. Superficially the France of Briand is behaving at the Washington conference in a manner akin to that adopted by the Germany of Wilhelm Hohenzollern at the Hague conference, which also confronted, altho vainly, the question of a limitation of armament.

Germany refused to accept any limitation on her armies or navy prior to the world war, and so frustrated the hopes of world peace. France today has agreed to the limitation of capital ships, and so has made a partial surrender. That distinguishes the present French military policy from the former German program. Another vital difference is to be found in the fact that not even the French chauvinists led by Raymond Poincare and others really cherish aggressive designs against their neighbors. Poincare uses bellicose words, but actually Poincare is as weak as an American yellow journalist.

The explanation of the conduct of the French government is to be found in the feelings of a considerable section of the French people. That in turn is explicable to those who remember the America of the period immediately following the civil war. The ideals which Lincoln held before the Union forces were akin to those for which France and all associated with her fought in the world war. Yet when the civil war was won and when Lincoln was removed from the scene the American government stood for policies too ignoble to find any defenders in a generation remote from the passion and bitterness and fatigue of that era. So is it in France. A nation cannot pour fourth its blood and treasure as France did, a people cannot sacrifice for ideals as the French did, without suffering a tremendous reaction.

The United States had to struggle out of the materiality of the post-civil war reconstruction period, and France will have to do likewise. It does no good to be impatient. Certainly it would be folly and crime to make the present mood of the French government the excuse for a renewal of competitive building. If this conference must adjourn without an agreement on the submarine question, let it be so. Another conference may be called, and by that time events, which move so swiftly and with such force, may have applied their logic to the situation. It may even soon be found that after their own native fashion the French have been merely seeking a bargain and that their naval ambitions are but a cover for other plans. Whatever may be the explanation, the world can afford to wait for France. By the grimmer sacrifice ever exacted of humanity Frenchmen have earned that.

Ship Subsidies Again

CHAIRMAN LASKER of the Shipping Board hastened to contradict the statement made Monday in a news dispatch that the administration had decided upon a ship subsidy plan to be presented to congress. According to Mr. Lasker, who issued his denial after a conference with President Harding, five boards of experts have been working upon shipping plans and no one of them has yet reported. The news dispatch appears to have been based upon a rough outline arrived at by one of the boards, but not formally submitted.

Yet this outline probably indicates the form that subsidy proposals will take. Its devices are the obvious ones. It is suggested that ships still in the hands of the Shipping Board be sold at the world market rates to American operators. This is a direct gift, since the board could almost certainly realize a larger return by waiting for a year or two. A second proposal is for a loan fund of $100,000,000, bearing interest at 5 per cent. A third is for the deduction from income tax returns of a percentage of freight paid by shippers in American bottoms and a larger allowance for depreciation of ships. A fourth is government insurance, which, after the government had stood the initial expense, would revert to the private owners. The fifth is a provision that at least half of the annual immigration must come in American ships. Finally, an out-and-out subsidy to cost $34,000,000 for the fiscal year 1922-1923 is suggested.

The disguises under which the gift of the taxpayers to the ship owners masquerade in this plan are sometimes ingenious, but the gift is there just the same. Every cent of benefit derived by ship owners from any such legislation will come out of the taxpayer's pocket or out of the pocket of the ultimate consumer. No political palaver can hide this fact.

Possibly the American people want a merchant marine badly enough to pay for it. The actual cost per capita of equalizing competitive conditions between our ships and British ships is not very great. It is the principle of the thing that has always gone against the grain of our public. Nor is there anything in the plan outlined which will win the public. If the ship owners want doles of public money they will have to go further than they have yet gone in submitting to public control.

The people do not seem to desire government ownership, but if shipping is to receive subsidies, direct or indirect, backstairs or front parlor, they ought to demand, and probably will demand, that profits be closely limited, and that every detail of financing and operation be subject to the regulation of the federal government.

New York Day-By-Day
By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Dec. 31—"Snarkey the Hat" has settled down to a life of peace and quiet in a little street on the edges of Chinatown—a street filled with young mothers and scrawny old children. He has a little corner candy shop where he will dole out lolly-pops and penny ice cream bricks to the neighborhood.

In the old days "Snarkey" was a bank thief—a snarker of talent. He once grabbed a $15,000 packet of bills, adroitly slipped it into his hat and in the mix-up led the chase for a planted confederate down the street. Hence the moniker "Snarkey the Hat."

He has done "two stretches" up the river and he knows the loneliness of San Quentin and Joliet. In the old days when underworld life bubbled about Fourteenth street, "Snarkey" was a personage. He was quick on the trigger and had a way with women.

When the chaso grew hot, he traveled the ocean liners as the sportive young millionaire, trimming passengers in the card rooms. At St. Moritz one season he gained the confidence of a rich Austrian lady, planned a hold-up in which he was to play the gallant and got away with jewels valued at $50,000. The lady still writes to him as a bold knight.

For years he rode the top waves of adventure. But at 60 the thrill lost its zest. He began to fumble his "leads" and he told friends that the night before he had planned a final job he suffered so from palpitation of the heart that he gave it up.

"Snarkey" is responsible for much picturesque underworld slang. It was he who gave the name "a grand" to a one thousand dollar bill and "a century" to a hundred dollar note. The thief's female confederate he gave the name of "Moll Buzzer."

League of Nations Has Smallest Gold Coin

LONDON, Dec. 31—Perhaps the smallest modern gold coin in the world has recently been minted at Geneva. It is known that the budget of the League of Nations is calculated on the basis of the gold franc, which normally has no separate existence. One gold franc has just been made as a specimen. Its weight is about a fiftieth of an ounce.

The coin has been presented to Sir Eric Drummond. Collectors would no doubt pay a frantic price for it.

WALT MASON
THE OLD YEAR

The gray old year is passing, it's dying in the snow; with sighing and wailing I watch the old year go; a bright new year's appearing, and all the boys are cheering, and by such noise they're queering the old year in its woe. For new things people clamor, all new things look like gold; and we have got a hammer for anything that's old, we have a cordial greeting for all new things we're meeting, and older things, retreating, may perish in the cold. New customs and new manners we greet with loud hurroo, and send off to the canner's the ones our fathers know; oh, anything that's hoary is but an old wives' story; the new things walk in glory, if what men say is true. And yet I shed some briny to see the old year sneak, his white dome bald and shiny, his foot-steps slow and weak; how much of good he sent me; how much of joy he lent me; and if some burdens bent me, I raised no craven shriek. The old year lavished blessings upon us all, I wist; he gave us more caressings than left hooks with his fist; and while men turn pointedly to greet the new year sprightly, the old one, sad, unsightly, is fading in the mist.

Softest Known Wood.
Trees belonging to the genus J. caratia, growing in tropical America, are remarkable for their soft wood. After part of the bark is cut away a machete can be shoved to the center of the trunk with ease. The wood, when fresh, can be cut into blocks with a knife, as one would cut up parsnips or turnips. As the wood dries, it shrinks to a small fraction of its original bulk.

Question of Influence.
The secret of success, according to a Kansas City minister, is to be born without money, friends or influence. Many are born without money, a few without friends, but we never heard of a baby without influence.—Kansas City Star.

WORLD MAKES REAL

Russia, thru vast sufferings, has learned that Bolshevism is not a panacea for the industrial ills of mankind but is a psychological disease. Lenin is bringing his country by leaps and bounds back to the system against which he so long inveighed. The beginnings of real democracy are apparent; and the dangerous imperialism is in eclipse.

The Amsterdam Labor Revolution has met with a similar fate. Britain had a grave crisis when her coal strike threatened to develop into a general strike; but the refusal of the American Federation to join with the radicals and the good sense of many of the British workers turned the scales against the upheaval. With that failure the Amsterdam International, with all its supposed 30,000,000 members, ceased to be a danger to the world.

Similarly British imperialism, which had sought after the war to consolidate a quarter of the earth's surface under its rulership, has been brot to book. It has had to give heed to the demands of British Liberalism, at home and in its dominions. The self-governing states that have grown up within the Empire have won the complete right to a voice in all foreign relations; and have insisted that the policies of Imperialism shall give way to reason. Ireland has the chance to join in the privileges of these states. India, already granted limited self-government, is on the road to greater freedom.

Other British Imperial plans—in the Near East—have been upset by the stubborn resistance of the Ottoman world. Afghanistan has been conceded full freedom. Persia has been evacuated except in the southern portions. Mesopotamia, altho still under a protecting mandate, has been turned over to an Arab king. Egypt can control practically her affairs if she will come to terms.

French Imperialism Checked

Equally, French Imperialism has failed to make headway. The party of ex-President Poincare and Marshal Foch has constantly sought to turn the nation along the pathway followed by Napoleon and have it strike for the hegemony of the Continent, but the French people, so far, have refused to be lured that way. They have stood by Briand, the pacificator, even tho they have hampered him.

They have refused to back up the schemes for the partition of Germany, the setting up of Hapsburg power in Hungary, and for warring on the Bolsheviki.

Germany, with all her troubles, has stood steadfastly by the new democracy. Those who know the history of the 1548 revolution had expected that by this time the people would have turned back into the sheepfold of the barons and kings. But, with the same determination with which they rejected Bolshevism, they have met and defeated the series of plots fomented by the ex-Kaiser, Hindenburg and Ludendorff.

Japan has had to give up a great deal of that vast scheme for an Empire which was to stretch to Lake Baikal in Siberia and take in all Mongolia and Northern China. She still insists on holding all the outlets of Siberia towards the Pacific and on the keeping control of the Shantung railway; but between the stress of hostile populations on the mainland; the threat of reprisals from a re-organized Russia, the pressure of western powers, the demands of Liberal elements at home, and her financial necessities, her grip is weakening and she is giving up a great deal of what she grabbed.

All these changes constitute the beginning of a vast revolution in the affairs and outlook of mankind; and the Washington Arms Congress has already recorded some of the new principles in black and white. Big guns and Imperialist force are going out of fashion together.

Grave Dangers Still Exist
But we are not yet out of the woods. The condition of Europe is still such that heroic measures must be taken to bring it back to order. Asia is far away from settlement of her vast problems. And there are grave differences of opinion among statesmen and military men as to the nature of the necessary remedies.

We have seen such differences flare up at the Washington Conference; particularly in the case of France insisting that she shall have such submarine and air fleets as will be bound to endanger the British in the Mediterranean and waters nearer home; and Britain, on the other hand, insisting that so far as Europe is concerned, she shall have the right to a fleet that can take care of the forces any two other powers can bring against her.

Behind that question are vast imperial, economic (and religious) issues which cannot easily be solved. Britain, with her millions of unemployed, feels she must set Germany and Russia on their feet if she is to escape serious trouble. France, with less unemployment, fears that if Germany and Russia are made strong again they will first crush Poland, her eastern bulwark, and then crush her.

Standing with the French is the political portion of the Catholic world in Europe. It has been fighting off Bolshevism for three years; and it cannot look with complacency on a policy directed by Protestant Britain which would put the Catholic states between the millstones of Lutheran Prussia and a Communist Russia which wars on religion.

Making trouble for these great antagonists are the small states of Eastern and Central Europe, which fear that they will again be forced within the spheres of great Imperial states. They are making renewed efforts to form a close alliance which will be able to tell France, Britain and Russia to keep hands off.

uniting Mohammedan world plays one force against the other as it strives again for mastery of western Asia and Eastern Africa. As the Prince of Wales enters on this troubled visit to the Hindus of Calcutta, the Moslems of Egypt break loose again.

Opportunity for America
Into these dangerous situations, however, America can bring the moderating influence she has exerted with such success in the Orient—if our statesmen are wise. For centuries Britain has dominated the world because, protected by the Channel and the North sea and controlling vast resources, she has been able to take the post of umpire in disputes of other nations.

Now that power has passed to us. With the protection of our oceans, with our ability to be self-sustaining, with the stupendous wealth we have gathered, we are safe from attack by any nation or group of nations now in sight. No people can afford to ignore our advice in world affairs.

If we wanted, we could gain world dominance by force, because we could play one nation off against another as the British imperialists have done. But we can gain even more authority by pursuing our policy of freedom for all. By aiding Russia and China to be free we are laying the foundations of firm friendship. Despite efforts to alienate them the Latin republics know how much we have done for their liberty. The British free states are gravitating towards our leadership. India, under her new status, is reaching out towards us.

Must Not Ignore Latins
We must, however, be careful not to be drawn into entanglements which will interfere with our peaceful influence. It is necessary to deal with the Empires in certain ways—necessary to go even to the extent of making such treaties as the Pacific pact—but let us not play the game of any world faction.

By our course so far in the Arms Congress we have aroused a great deal of suspicion among the Latin nations, who fear we are lending ourselves to a combination of the English-speaking peoples for domination of the world. It was a great mistake in the first place to ignore the vigorous Southern Republics, for in the great war they found they were vital factors in world affairs and they believe they are as much entitled as European nations to a voice in settlements for the future.

It is well to remember that in the closing days of the Wilson administration it was found necessary to send Secretary Colby on a visit to South America because of the inroads made on our influence by the movement for a Latin union which was being pressed from Spain, France and Italy. Much good was done by Mr. Colby, but it can now be said very gravely that a great deal of this good has been undone by our failure to take counsel with the South American statesmen.

Our appearance of support of the British against the French in the matter of naval control of the Mediterranean—which Latins look upon as their sea—has intensified the feeling, it would be well not to go too far along that line. Neither world peace nor peace at home would be promoted by convincing the Latins and the Catholic world that they must unite against an English-speaking world Entente.

Document of the Early Church.

The "Didache, or Teaching of the Twelve Apostles," was a didactic work for use in the early church. It was discovered by Bryennius at Constantinople and published in 1883. It had been written in Greek, about 1058 A. D. It is of great value for the study of organization, belief and worship of the early church and was held in high esteem. It is a description of the two ways of life and death—in the form of rules for Christian conduct.

Tillie's Sailor-Sweetheart

By WINIFRED DUNBAR

Copyright, 1921, Western Newspaper Union.

The Rochester foundered many years ago off the Maine shore. She was an old slave, put, since the war, to the happier task of running cargoes between Portland and Boston and other seaports along the Atlantic coast. Jim Purvis was the son of the Aquamuskat banker, and he was put under the care of the skipper because he was wild. His father thought a taste of seafaring life might cure him.

Perhaps it would have done so had not the Rochester gone to pieces in an Atlantic gale. All that was ever found of her was a piece of timber with the name on it, and an empty water keg.

Tillie Bent had to break the news to Millicent. The dead man's father dared not do it. Millicent was Jim's sweetheart and they were to have been married that fall, if Jim were cured of his propensity to roam. Millicent was a cold and rather heartless girl, but the old banker, who had made the match, thought her the acme of all that a woman should be.

Tillie was only the maid, she had gone to school with Millicent, but when her father died and the little farm was sold there was no way in which she could earn a livelihood except by service. She was a simple country girl.

When Tillie broke the news Millicent wept and lost her appetite for nearly a week. Gradually she became reconciled. Within a month she was busy breaking the hearts of the young men of Aquamuskat.

Tillie was the only person that had ever loved Jim or understood him. And on the evening before Jim's departure he had come to her and put his arms around her.

"Tillie," he said, "I'm going away, and I want to tell you I love you and always shall. And when I come back it's you I'm going to marry and not Millicent, Tillie," he said.

That was all that passed between them. But when she had broken the news Tillie went up to her room and cried bitterly. Then she went about her task as bravely as before.

Seven years passed. Millicent had been married five of them. She and her husband quarreled bitterly most of their lives. Sometimes she thought regretfully of Jim.

Tillie was employed in the new post office. Often she would stroll along the beach and watch the pounding breakers, look at the distant ships and wonder whether they, too, carried boys like Jim aboard, who had left their sweethearts behind them.

That Jim was still alive she had no notion, until the shock came. It came in the person of Millicent, white as a ghost, and trembling. She entered Tillie's cottage late in the evening.

"Tillie," she cried, "Jim's alive!" Tillie pressed her hand to her throat, but she betrayed no emotion. For Jim's sake she must never let Millicent know.

"A letter came for me. Didn't you recognize the hand? Jim was picked up by a liner and has been a sailor all these years. He has risen to be a captain. He has a fine ship, and it has put in at Portland and he's coming home tomorrow to claim me. Tillie, you must break the news."

"I love Jim," Millicent babbled on. "I'm going to get a divorce and marry him. He is going to meet me on the sands at four. You must be there instead."

"Yes," answered Tillie.

At four o'clock she was pacing the shore in dumb, helpless misery. Tillie cried a little, and then she grew very brave, for somebody was coming toward her from the cliff.

But this tall, bearded man, this was not Jim. She stared incredulously. This was not Jim.

"He had taken her by the hands and was staring at her incredulously.

"Tillie," I never dreamed that you would be here. When I heard Millicent was married I felt like a free man the first time in years. I had to be honorable and I couldn't come home."

"I love you, Jim!"

"I have always loved you, Tillie. And now I am going to marry you."

"But Millicent loves you, Jim. She feels that her marriage was all a mistake. She wants to get a divorce and marry you. She—"

Jim was looking very grimly at her. "Do you think—can you think I want that kind of woman for my wife, Tillie, when it's you—?"

Tillie couldn't answer that conundrum, so she let Jim kiss her.

Keep Charcoal in Medicine Chest.

The medicine closet of every household should contain a well stoppered bottle with finely pulverized fresh charcoal. Dr. Secheyron, one of the professors of the university of Toulouse, France, has ascertained by a series of tests that charcoal is one of the most efficacious antidotes against nearly all kinds of poison.

Even in cases of poisoning by quickly acting poisons, such as strychnine and teadistool, serious consequences were averted by giving to the patient at intervals of ten minutes liberal doses of charcoal suspended in water. Water and finely pulverized charcoal are placed in a bottle and violently shaken before a dose of the mixture is given to the patient.—Popular Science Monthly.

Little Mother of Mine

By GEORGE S. BRENGLE

Sometimes in the hush of the evening hour,
When shadows creep from the West,
I think of the twilight songs you sang
And the boy you lull'd to rest—
The wee little boy with the tousled head,
That so long ago was thine,
I wonder if sometimes you long for that boy;
O little mother of mine!

And now he has come to man's estate,
Grown stalwart in body and strong,
You'd hardly know that he was the lad
You lulled with your slumber song.
The years have altered the form and the life,
But the heart is unchanged by time:
And still he is only your boy as of old,
O little mother of mine!

CONDEMN PROPOSAL TO EXPLOIT ALASKA

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31.—Secretary Fall's proposed grab of the great Alaska National Forests, which he proposed be handed over to the merces of the Interior Department thru a Development Board yet to be authorized, has aroused the American Forestry Association to loud and determined protest.

"Shall Alaska be made the promised land of milk and honey for the interests?" asks P. S. Riddsdale of the association, and he shows that as the result of 15 years of scientific organization and development by the U. S. Forest Service the Alaska forests have been made a large factor in building up the Territory and insuring a permanent supply of fuel, lumber and pulp wood for the people of Alaska and the Pacific Northwest. He warns the American public that if Fall takes these forests from the Forest Service the greatest single property owned by the nation will be quickly dissipated for the benefit of a few corporations.

Col. W. B. Greely, chief of the Forest Service, declares in the national forests in Alaska lies a practical solution of the paper shortage, and that the Development Board plan is unnecessary, unscientific, wasteful and unfair to the future State of Alaska, which will desire to develop all possible resources under Alaskan control. All sections of the American Forestry Association are now joining in the defense of the Alaska forests and of the Forest Service, which is considered to be the final target of Fall's attack.

Civil Suit Filed

The Western Reserve Varnish Co. of Cleveland, has filed suit in Justice R. B. McDermott's office against R. H. Pinnell, painter and decorator, of Roscoe, in an effort to collect the sum of $215.50 with interest on a bill of goods purchased from that firm in December, 1920.

R. B. McDermott will represent the plaintiff in this case.

COLLEGE STUDENTS ENJOY RECEPTION AT LOCAL CHURCH

Close to 100 people, including young men and women who are enrolled in the various colleges and universities regardless of their denominational affiliations, together with their parents and friends, enjoyed the get-together meeting of college students held Friday evening in Grace M. E. church.

The committee in charge, composed of Mrs. Seth M. Snyder, Mrs. W. B. Winters, Mrs. Joseph Thomson and Rev. W. B. Winters, arranged a delightful time for the young people.

Mrs. Snyder called the meeting to order, and one student in each college represented was called upon to give a brief talk about his selected college, why he considered it to be the best.

Rev. Winters was then called upon to give the address of welcome and he spoke briefly upon the relationship of the church to education in general. He also extended to the guests in behalf of the children, a Happy New Years greeting.

The remainder of the evening was enjoyed in an informal social way singing college songs and giving college yells.

Light refreshments at tables and punch was served by the social committee.

W. & J. TEAM READY FOR CALIFORNIA TILT

PASARENA, Calif., Dec. 31.—With the arrival of the Washington and Jefferson football squad here today, the stage is set for the big game between the presidents and the university of California at Tournament park Monday.

The tournament of roses officials announced there would be a capacity crowd on hand for the contest. Tournament park seats 42,000 people and practically every seat has been sold.

The arrival of the Presidents caused their stock to soar. The team has been highly touted by eastern football nuts and California has also come to recognize them as a dangerous foe. While California is a strong favorite to win, bets on the probable score are scarce and it seems to be the prevailing opinion that W. and J. will prove a tougher opponent than did Ohio State a year ago.

On the arrival of the presidents today, Coach Neal stated his men are in great condition. He plans two short workouts for tomorrow and will send his men to the fray in the same condition in which they left the train.

Smith's California squad is in grand shape. The men have been working hard every day and except for a couple of off days around Xmas, there has been no break in their training.

A NEW YEARS RESOLUTION

Find Your Old Sweetheart Again

—Drop your newspaper for a night, maybe she is tired of a paper wall and silence and the width of a lighted lamp between you. Maybe she's thinking of those other evenings you sat next to each other and there were no lights.

—Forest the news for once, take her to see the SNIDEKERS CALIFORNIA STOCK COMPANY Players and see a show worthy of your best and finest moods—clean and interesting throughout. There will be no table between you, no light to disclose harsh realities. You'll sit close side by side and maybe your heads will touch, you will learn how to be lovers again and as that unconscious, hard crust of life is melted by the kindly warmth of a finer tender feeling, you'll glance at each other and see—Not brows knit with problems and plans of today and tomorrow—but the shy young girl, strong and romantic youth of those other, by-gone days and their never forgotten sweetness. You, Mr. Married Man, accept this opportunity—and you young chaps, bear in mind that your lady friends will enjoy a good show also.

—Start the New Year right. Go to the MYSTIC at least twice a week. May the coming year and years be more than good to you and yours, is the sincere wish of self and my entire company.

H. RAY SNEDEKER.
